RUSSIANS ROUT GERMANS

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The evacuation of East Prussia by the Germans is announced in an official dispatch from St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 26.—Signal successes of Russian troops resulting in the retreat of the German army in East Prussia to Koenigsberg, and the withdrawal of the Austrian troops into Central Galicia were announced by the general staff today. It was stated that the Vilna army, the northern Russian force, would invest Koenigsberg and that the Warsaw army would have as its objective the city of Posen, about 148 miles east of Berlin.

The Warsaw army will later be joined by the forces operating against the Austrians in Galicia. Of the campaign the statement of the general staff reads:

"The invasion of Prussia and Galicia has continued uninterruptedly since Sunday along a wide front. In Galicia the Austrians were repulsed after a series of fights, losing numerous guns and wagons and much ammunition. The German army in East Prussia is retreating in forced marches, part concentrating at Koenigsberg. The roads are strewn with equipment thrown aside to hasten the retreat.

"The Twentieth German army corps fled, abandoning several field guns, rapid firers, ammunition and prisoners."

The official report from General Rennenkampf was also made public. "The Austrian rear guard, supported by artillery, attempted to hamper our march in the River Serath region at Tarnapes and Tchetkove, but they were repulsed. We took numerous wagons and two quick-firing guns.

"South of Grouibeschove we brought down an Austrian aeroplane killing two officers and wounding a third man.

GERMAN ADVANCE HALTED AS ARMIES CONTINUE BATTLE

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The allies have effectually arrested the advance of the Germans along the great battle line and have recaptured the positions they lost in Monday's reverses, according to a statement issued by the War Office today.

It was also announced that the French troops were making progress in the Luneville region and that the situation in the Vosges was unchanged.

"The efforts of the great German army," the statement continues, "to enter France from the north near Lille and turn the left wing of the French resulted in honor for the French and British forces. Following their defeat of Monday, they have now advanced into Belgium, and have regained and occupied advantageous positions.

"The Germans suffered immense losses, and as the battle has only commenced it is certain that the carnage will be frightful."

BATTLING ON THE MEUSE.

A dispatch from Mons to the Daily Telegraph says:

"The Germans are committed to a great turning movement. They are striving to hold the French along the Meuse while the armies to the west of that river march southward along a front many miles wide.

"One army threatens Mons, with the object of penetrating the French frontier and descending on Maubeuge and Valience, another army is advancing toward the line extending from Tournai, capital of Belgian department of Hainut, to Courtrai, which covers the city of Lille."

GERMANS IN KAIO-CHAU FIGHT HARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Failure of the Japanese attack on Tsing-Tao, the fortified port of Kiao-Chau, is announced in an official dispatch received from the German legation at Pekin by Count Von Bernsdorff, the German ambassador to the United States, today. The dispatch follows:

"The attack of the Japanese on Kiao-Chau has failed and in consequence they must start regular siege operations."

The Count said the message indicated that the Japanese had attempted to take Tsing-Tao by a bombardment or by storm. He said that the German defenders of the stronghold would fight to the death.

BATTLE LINE NOW 200 MILES LONG; FRENCH ADVANCE ON THE INVADERS.

BELIEVE BRITISH LOSS OVER 2,000

hausen in order that all available troops may be thrown into today's battle for the protection of the French frontier.

If the French lose, Paris must soon face another siege, probably much like that of the Franco-Prussian war.

If the Germans lose, the war game of the Powers will stand at checkmate.

In the eastern field, where a German army holds the city of Luneville, the French have taken the offensive. Two great armies are throwing themselves upon the invaders. In other parts of the battle line the allies are reported strongly posted in carefully chosen positions.

With the news of the great encounter there has come the announcement from an official of the Japanese embassy of the United States to the effect that Japan may carry the war into Europe.

"If war eagerness of England should require assistance by Japan outside of the Far East," the Japanese diplomat is quoted as saying, in effect, "Nippon would by her treaty obligations be forced seriously to consider giving assistance outside of Asia."

If this view of the situation is that of the Japanese nation, it may not be long before the Japanese will be on French soil, fighting the armies of the Kaiser. And should the great battle now in progress go against the allies, it is not altogether improbable that England will call upon her Oriental ally for assistance.

A Japanese fleet may even act in the Baltic Sea.

It is announced here that the first British casualties in Belgium are estimated at 2,000 killed and wounded. This, however, is regarded as being far too low.

The London Times, summarizing the situation this morning, says:

"Yesterday's news added little to our knowledge of the actual fighting which has taken place since Sunday on the Belgian and French frontiers.

"It does not, however, the effect of clearing considerably the situation of the hostile armies.

PHAMMER AT FRONTIER."

"It is now evident the French were not content with remaining on the defensive, and influenced doubtless by their desire to attack the German invaders in Belgium itself, attempted to take the offensive in the neighborhood of Namur and Charleroi and to drive a wedge into the German advance.

"The forward movements of the armies in Lorraine and Alsace earlier were part of this general plan of campaign and had a temporary success.

"But on the whole long frontier from Mons in the north to Belfort in the south, the attempt to carry the war into the enemy's country has been hurled back, and everywhere now the German armies are hammering at the French frontier.

"The British army around Mons has necessarily been involved in the withdrawal of the allies. Tributes to its steadiness and dogged resistance against superior forces are numerous. Prime Minister said yesterday the difficult operation of withdrawing to a new position was successfully carried out.

"Their losses have been considerable. No details have yet been received."

'PROUD OF TROOPS."

"Lord Kitchener telegraphed, 'Congratulate troops on their splendid work. We are proud of them.'

"Lord Kitchener devoted much of his statement to Parliament to the necessity that Great Britain and her dominions should equip and train a constantly increasing supply of men to make their decisive influence in the closing stages of a long-drawn-out war.

"The secretary for War concluded with the statement that in the next six or seven months Great Britain would be able to maintain continually in the field over half a million men.

"The Belgian army is reported to have issued from Antwerp and to be engaging a German force near Malines.

"The German army in Belgium has resumed the offensive, and once more this battle rages to the north of France."

Maps showing the progress of the war from the latest dispatches. At left the great battle line along the French frontier, where the Kaiser is striving to gain a foothold in French territory; at right, the Russian invasion of Prussia, where the Germans are reported to have been defeated and the towns indicated have been captured by the armies of the Czar.

SIX FORTS OF NAMUR STILL HOLDING OUT

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—The city of Namur was captured by the German troops at 8 o'clock Monday evening. Three of the forts there have fallen, but six are still holding out, according to official reports received from the front by the War Office today. The forts captured are Marchovelette, Maizeret and Andoy.

Marchovelette is northeast of the city. Maizeret lies to the east and Andoy to the southeast. Their fall under a terrific bombardment gave the Germans access to the city itself.

The shells hurled by the German artillery caused heavy damage in Namur. Several buildings in the heart of the town were set on fire, but the flames were stopped by the victorious troops after entering the city.

One of the spires of the famous Namur Cathedral is said to have been shattered by a shell.

The forts still holding out are Cognelee, Emines, Suarlee, Malonne, St. Heribert and Dave. Fort Dave was badly damaged by the German bombardment and is likely to fall. Most of its guns are out of action.

The five other forts lying northwest and southwest of the city are unable to interfere with the passage of the Germans along the Meuse, but Forts Malonne and St. Heribert, which are south of the Sambre, are being shelled vigorously.

The fall of Forts Marchovelette, Maizeret and Andoy was due to the superiority of the German gunners. They directed their fire so well that within one hour after the bombardment began the chief guns of the forts were silenced and their capture was rendered a simple matter.

The entrance into the town was considered to little resistance, practically all of the Belgian troops having withdrawn and left the burden of defence to the forts, which were considered impregnable.

PARIS FEELING RUNS HIGH OVER CONDUCT OF TROOPS

PARIS, Aug. 26.—Public feeling in Paris is at high tension. It is known that either insubordination or cowardice on the part of the French troops was responsible for some of the early successes of the Germans in Alsace. The actual details are being hidden by the War Office.

Probably by an oversight this reference to the unfortunate affair was allowed to creep into an official statement:

"The Fifteenth Corps, which suffered heavily in the last fight, had the gaps in its ranks filled and formed part of the two armies. It executed a brilliant counter attack in the valley of the Vezeouze. The attitude of the troops was splendid, effacing all memories of their conduct on August 20."

The scene of the French troops' disgrace cannot be learned, but it is known that General Pau was selected to command them after the affair occurred. He is the strictest disciplinarian in the French army.

KING ALBERT FLEES FROM ZEPPELIN PERIL

By BERNARD BELANCOURT,

ANTWERP, via London, Aug. 26.—King Albert and the royal family have fled from the palace fearing that another attempt will be made by a Zeppelin airship to destroy them. The King, Queen and their children have taken up their residence in a home the location of which is kept secret to ward off danger.

When I arrived here from Rosendaal today I found Antwarp in terrors. Sentinels have been placed on the tallest buildings to give warning by day, and mines than thirty searchlights have been installed to sweep the heavens at night.

The attack of the Zeppelin airship yesterday struck panic to the hearts of the Belgians. Resting secure behind the great fortifications that guard the city they had given no thought to the danger that threatened them from the air until it was known that the Zeppelin was dropping its death-like shells into the streets.

The Zeppelin came in the early hours of the morning or the tragedy that fell sure that we were to be let out and killed, but the American consul had heard about our plight and arrived just in the nick of time, proving to the authorities that we were peaceful tourists."

who were killed perished in their sleep. The most heavy damage was caused in the vicinity of the Place Du Folds Public. That district is surrounded by a cordon of civic guards today while the search for dead goes on in the shattered buildings.

The exact number of dead is unknown thus far, but it is expected to range from forty-five to fifty. It is reported, but I have been unable to confirm this, that several of the bombs dropped by the Zeppelin fell into a hospital where Belgian nurses were caring for Germans injured in the recent fighting, and that a number of persons were killed.

Though the Zeppelin directed its efforts against the public buildings and the royal palace, the aim was poor in many cases and the little homes in the centre of the city were the worst sufferers. In one of these an entire family was literally blown to pieces.

GERMAN GOVERNOR FOR BELGIUM.

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—The appointment of Field Marshal Freidherr Von Der Goltz as Military Governor of Belgium was announced today. The Governor of Aix la Chapelle has been appointed to act as civil administrator under Von Der Goltz.

This dispatch indicates that Germany has annexed Belgium as a German province.

CONFIRM AUSTRIAN ROUT.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—An official dispatch from St. Peterburg today confirms the rout of Austrian cavalry at Plougoddan, with a loss of two batteries of artillery and 200 prisoners.

10,000 AUSTRIANS KILLED.

NISH, Servia, Aug. 26.—More than 10,000 Austrians were killed and 20,000 wounded in the nine days' battle with Servians on the River Save, according to survivors of the conflict. It was said here today that 400,000 men had taken part in the engagement, which was bloodier than any conflict in the two recent Balkan wars. Hundreds of dead bodies are floating down the Save toward the Danube. It is expected that remnants of the Austrian army will surrender at once, as the Servian government claims their retreat has been cut off.

OMINOUS LACK OF NEWS FROM NAMUR.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The government press bureau announced today that it had no further information regarding Namur. An Exchange Telegraph Company dispatch from Ostend said that the fall of Namur had not been confirmed.

FALMOUTH, Eng., Aug. 26.—More than 400 German and Austrian reservists who arrived here on the Holland-American liner Potsdam were immediately made prisoners of war and are now in the hands of military authorities.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—It is officially announced that British reinforcements are coming to France.

WHITE DENIES THAT HE SAID GERMANY WAS BLAMELESS

COPENHAGEN, via London, Aug. 26.—A general denial was made today by Henry White, formerly United States ambassador to France, of the report that he had said that Germany was not to blame for the war. The report was widely circulated throughout the continent.

"No such statement was made by me," said White. "I merely presented upon the excellent treatment given Americans by Germans. This has been uniformly good, although several Americans did run into trouble. What the cause of this was I do not know.

"It is the duty of every American to be neutral in the word as well as deed. I wish to lay emphasis upon the necessity for the strictest neutrality on the part of Americans. This war is not their business and they should keep out of it."

AMERICAN CONSULS BITTERLY CRITICISED BY REFUGEES

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Many American refugees were among the fifty-two first cabin, 152 second cabin and 1552 steerage passengers that were brought to this port today by the Italian steamer Taormina which sailed from Italian ports. The steerage was well crowded with Americans who looked for that passage when nothing else was available, rather than stay longer in Europe.

The Taormina was hailed to and at 11 at Gibraltar by an English cruiser, and after an examination of the ship had been made, it was allowed to proceed. Between Naples and Gibraltar the ship was hailed again, this time by three British cruisers. When additional explanations were made the ship was permitted to continue on her trip.

Most of the passengers had stories to relate concerning the shortage of money, the inability to get sleeping accommodations and the terrible conditions in Europe. Some of the passengers bitterly criticised some of the American consuls. They said that the officials did not exert themselves to help the stranded Americans.

Dr. John Riegelman, coroner's physician of Bronx county, who has been with several other New York doctors, were arrested on the German border as they were trying to cross from Austria after the outbreak of war. They were charged with being spies.

"We came mighty near to being executed," said Dr. Riegelman. "When arrested we had a camera. Our films were developed and they were innocent pictures of German forests. But this seemed to convince the German authorities that we surely were spies. We were told that unless we could prove that we were not Englishmen we would be shot at sunrise.

"Daybreak finally came and the doors of our cells were opened and we were told that we were to be let out and killed, but the American consul had heard about our plight and arrived just in the nick of time, proving to the authorities that we were peaceful tourists."

AMERICANS REPORT LOSS OF PAPERS AND MONEY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Aug. 26.—Hundreds of Americans are arriving here from Germany penniless. Many of the refugees report they have been robbed of important documents and money and that their fellow Americans in Germany are in a pitiable state.

The situation is particularly bad at Carlsbad, where they say that Americans are suffering indignities, although they have been taken under the protection of the United States consulate.

GERMAN SCOUTS REPORTED ONLY 9 MILES FROM ANTWERP

By BERNARD BELANCOURT,
American Staff Correspondent.

ANTWERP, via London, Aug. 26.—German scouts were seen today at Terveuren, only nine miles from the centre of Antwerp, though the Belgian War Office issued a statement declaring that the Kaiser's troops had been driven back from Malines to Valvorde.

The official statement follows:

"On Monday the army sallied out of Antwerp, and on Tuesday it threw back three German divisions to Valvorde, east of the railway between Brussels and Antwerp. Several guns were captured.

"The engagement at Malines lasted four hours." It is now reported, but not confirmed, that the cathedral at Malines was damaged. Another rumor here says that the Germans are preparing to evacuate Brussels or have already done so.

STILL BOMBARD BELGRADE.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Nish, Servia, says:

"The latest information is that the bombardment of Belgrade is still most severe. Shells of large calibre are doing immense damage. The palace has been partly burned.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The French embassy officially announced today that all Austrian troops had been driven from Servian territory.

Sure Indications of Lung Trouble

Among the indications of threatened Lung Trouble are a continued cough, fever and night sweats. A change of climate often helps, but it seems that something more is needed to stop the cough and arrests and arrest the progress of disease. Scott's Emulsion, after a test of years of use, is known to be most beneficial in bringing about relief, in many cases complete recoveries. Investigate this case.

Scott City, Mo.

"Gentlemen: I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pleurisy in my lungs. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Emulsion. I paid no attention to him then. I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did, and when I got there I started taking your Emulsion. Somehow the bad news told me about your medicine. I began taking it with no faith whatever, but before I had taken three bottles I could eat anything. Fever and night sweats ceased and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."

Say Kaiser Tore Off His British Medals

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The Express today prints the following:

"When Sir William Edward Goschen went to say good-bye to Emperor William, he was stalled into the room where the British ambassador was waiting. The Emperor was wearing several British orders and medals on his breast. These he tore off, saying:

"Tell your King that is what I think of him and his word."

"The Emperor then marched out of the room."

FIRST DETAILS OF GREAT BATTLE WON BY GERMAN ARMY

EYE WITNESS TELLS OF FEARFUL CARNAGE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Furious fighting centering around Charleroi is going on today in the great battle between the French and British allies and the Germans in southwestern Belgium.

The fourth day of the engagement found the allies taking the offensive and pounding away at the German lines which lie north of the Sambre River and in the tongue of Belgian soil between the Sambre and the point where the Meuse River cuts into France.

Reinforcements are being rushed forward for the allies, and the French government admits that the fate of France undoubtedly hangs on the outcome of the conflict.

With two of the Belgian forts at Namur in the possession of the Germans and another out of commission the artillery of the invading host is thundering against the steel and stone walls of the remaining works.

A report received early in the day said that the right wing of the German army, lying in the province of Hainault, between Coutrai and Mons, was wavering before the repeated assaults of the left wing of the allies.

But at the same time word was received from Paris that a detachment of Uhlans had been seen near Dousai, France, eighteen miles over the Belgian border. French and British troops are stationed in that region.

According to the French government the allies have regained their original position east of the Meuse, between the northern border of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg and Givet. At that point the French troops claim to control all the roads leading into the great wooded tracts of the department of Ardennes.

Details of the first two days of fighting show that this conflict will go down as one of the great decisive battles in the history of the world. The gallantry with which the troops on both sides have stood up under artillery and machine gun fire and the courage with which they have faced the gleaming platoons of cold steel will also make this one of the bloodiest battles known to mankind.

ALLIES PINNED FAITH ON STRENGTH OF NAMUR FORTS

In the first two days' fighting the battle line was approximately 150 miles long, with the most desperate fighting centering north, west and south of Charleroi, just as was the case today.

When the conflict began the British troops were massed in the centre of the allies' lines with French on both sides, supported at intervals by squadrons of Algerians and Territorial reserves. This line formed the base of a triangle of which the Namur forts were the apex.

The allies were depending on the strength of the Namur forts to prevent a big concentration movement on the part of the invaders. With the falling of some of these forts the Germans pressed southward toward the Sambre, a scant 20 miles south of Brussels, where a big part of the mighty Teutonic host has been massed.

ADVANCE OF GERMANS.

Another action of the German army, believed to have numbered 200,000 men, pressed forward toward the Meuse from the direction of the Belgian Ardennes.

Namur at the apex of the allies' lines having partly fallen, both sides of the triangle were imperiled and the whole actual position of the French and British crumbled on Sunday, allowing the Germans to push forward. The French troops fell back through Charleroi to the second line of defence, but the rearward movement was the signal for desperate fighting.

The second line of the Allies was on French soil stretching between Rocroi and Mezieres. From the heights around Maubeuge the French artillery now began to shell Charlroi which the Germans had occupied. This was the second artillery attack upon Charleroi, the Germans having bombarded it before the French evacuated.

So deadly was the fire of the French guns that the German lines were weakened and a counter attack by the allies was ordered. The entire front line of the allies advanced upon Charleroi taking the city by a grand assault.

SLAUGHTER UNEQUALED IN THE HISTORY OF WARFARE

A war correspondent who had the good fortune to be on the scene of the fighting in its earlier stages has given a graphic account of the battle scenes.

"The slaughter on both sides is on a scale hitherto unknown in history. All the evidence tends to show, however, that the French artillery, and particularly the mitrailleuse, have inflicted greater loss upon the Germans than was incurred by the allies. The streets of Charleroi are full of dead.

"I left Charleroi on the last train just after the German cannonading began. Right along the line to Nivelle the fields passed between skirmishing lines in the wheat fields on both sides. When the train reached Kol, to the southward of Brussels, the station master, running down the platform, stopped the train with a red flag and informed us that the Germans had already occupied the town.

HUSSARS SLAUGHTERED.

"This proved to have been an error, however. There was a large body of French in the town, unknown to the little detachment of Death's Head Hussars (Germans) who had ridden in to take possession. The Germans, being taken for English cavalry men, were cheered by the people as they rode toward the railroad station. Suddenly they came upon the French and were cut to pieces.

As to the beginning of the bombardment the correspondent said:

"I was standing at the railway station, which was crowded with refugees, fighting to get aboard trains that would carry them from the danger zone. Suddenly there was a deep rumble, then with the scream of a shell almost immediately there was a crash, and the shrapnel dropped upon the roof of the station. The people were thrown into panic. At once the sound of the German artillery grew into a steady drumming and shells began dropping everywhere. I jumped upon the locomotive of a train and I understand it was the last to leave the city.

"The roads leading out of Charleroi were filled with men, women and children seeking refuge in the city.

"Turn back, turn back, we called to them."

The correspondent said that a large force of British troops were at Mons, where they were making themselves perfectly at home. Mons is surrounded by canals on every side except the south, where the green woods stretch away into the distance. All the bridges over these canals that had not been blown up with dynamite were commanded by rapid-fire guns which had been planted behind barricades. The presence of the English troops seemed to inspire the people with confidence and there were but few signs of panic.

GERMAN AND FRENCH BIRDMEN IN BATTLE OF THE CLOUDS

"I went up to speak to an English army officer," continues the narrative of the correspondent. "Suddenly we heard the hum of an aeroplane and upon looking upward saw a German air machine flying over the city. The English troops opened a fusillade, but the German airman continued his trip, circling slowly over the English lines.

Suddenly he wheeled his machine and made off rapidly toward the east. Just then a French biplane cut through the air at a tremendous height. As the machines disappeared we could see the French aviator shoot his machine downward in an attempt to ram the German air craft."

The correspondent left Mons, going in the direction of Peruwelz and Blaton, about fifteen miles northwest of Mons.

"After much delay," says the journalist, "we got started again, passing many dead bodies on the way. At one place we saw the corpses of six Uhlans and their horses all tangled together.

"A German force had taken up a position near Tournai, 28 miles northwest of Mons, opposite Lille, on Saturday morning.

"They put their mitrailleuses in action at once, firing upon the defenses of the Pont de Morael. The first attack of the Germans was repulsed, but they were able to advance afterwards."

The newspaperman then made his way to Lille, which was crowded with fugitives and with reports from there he started toward Valenciennes, with the idea of working his way back to Charleroi. He was successful in reaching that point, and all along the French frontier he heard reports of the German advance. At Valenciennes one troop train after another was arriving, filled with French and English soldiers.

EXCEEDED LIGHT BRIGADE.

"I boarded a troop train and reached Chimay, just over the line in Belgium, Sunday night," continues the adventuresome correspondent. "Chimay is forty-two miles southeast of Valenciennes and twenty-two southeast of Charleroi. From there I went to Philippeville, in the very heart of the allies' army. All Sunday night between Chimay and Philippeville I could hear the roar of big guns (Philippeville is ten miles northeast of Chimay and fifteen miles south west of Charleroi).

"At Philippeville there was news of big and sensational events at Charleroi."

Refugees who swarmed into Philippeville on Monday told how the Turcos, who are fighting with the French, charged a German battery, bayoneting the gunners. Their losses, it is believed, exceeded those of the Light Brigade at Balaklava.

"The bravery of the French and their African allies, however, was powerless against the advance of the great German force. The carnage was indescribable."

The narrative continues:

"Before the Charleroi railway station, on the banks of a canal, the Germans fought for two hours to get control of the bridge. The waters of the canal were crimson with blood and the narrow channel was choked with bodies. Once they had captured this bridge, the Germans gained all along the line, occupying the villages of Marchienne, Thuin, Gilly and Montignies and the country nearly so far as Walcourt.

FACED WITHERING FIRE.

"The French fell back, then bombarded the city, then moved against the city, taking it by storm, as was earlier stated in this account."

In the meantime the gunners of the Kaiser's gunners had directed their fire against the northern part of the city; the French concentrated their salvos against the southern part.

"The French soldiers advanced in the teeth of a withering fire which burst continuously from the muzzles of hundreds of machine guns," the war correspondent. "They entered several villages, using the houses for barricades. Sharpshooters tried to pick off the German gunners. The German artillery men had torn off their gray jackets and some were working in their undershirts. Their faces and bodies were streaked with dirt and blood and their trousers torn and smeared with the grime of burned gunpowder.

"The August day was hot and sweat streamed from the faces of the gunners. Above them the sky was obscured by the clouds of white smoke that rolled upward from the batteries in mighty volume.

"The muzzles of the giant Krupps were hot with the incessant fire, and it made a picture, as awe-inspiring as conceptions of the inferno, to see the long spurts of flame splitting the battle pall which drifted over the field."

DEAD MEN PROPPED UP IN CORPSE-CHOKED STREETS

In describing the scenes afterwards French infantry men said that the streets on the outskirts of Charleroi became so jammed with corpses that some of those who were killed remained in a standing position, being supported by the bodies of their slain comrades.

"Throughout Sunday night and Monday the roar of artillery could be heard on all sides of Charleroi.

"Charleroi is in the centre of an active industrial and mining district. The slag heaps of the surrounding country offer an admirable vantage for the mitrailleuses of the French. And now for a picture of the scenes in Charleroi proper after the Germans had been driven across the Sambre.

CURSES OF THE DYING.

"The city was blasted by shell fire. The streets and the houses were filled with bodies. The screams of the wounded were heard on every hand. Curses, uttered in the last delirium of death, rolled upward to mingle with the prayers and cries of other wounded.

"Outside of an inn I saw the dead figure of a German officer, with his head bowed over a basin of soap and water. He had been killed while washing the powder grim from his face.

"I saw the body of another German sprawled across a table. He had been in the act of drinking a cup of coffee when a bullet crashed into his head.

"In every part of the city houses were smouldering or in flames. Streets were plowed up in gigantic furrows by the bursting of shells. The pavements were strewn with dead bodies and the debris from damaged houses. Windows were smashed, not only by the flying wreckage, but by the trembling of the earth, caused by the concussion of the mighty batteries which had been blasting the country side with their fire for many hours. Terror-stricken residents huddled in cellars and churches, praying for relief from the storm which was bursting over their city."

The war correspondent, whose narrative is here given, having heard that Namur had been taken by the Germans, started in that direction. Not far from Philippeville he met a Belgian army officer and the pay-master of Namur. They said that the Germans had bombarded the city and had then occupied it.

THE FALL OF NAMUR.

They said that the German armaments were so heavy and the cannonade so well directed by the German gunners, that it required but a brief time to silence the guns of Fort Marchovelette and Fort Maizeret. (Fort Maizeret lies between three and four miles northeast of the city.)

The Fort d'Andry, southeast of the city, has been practically put out of action, they said.

The correspondent continues as follows:

"In spite of the elaborate preparations made at Namur by the erection of barbed wire entanglements through which passed an electrical current of 1,500 volts, and the liberal use of broken glass, Namur fell without much resistance.

SOCIETY WOMEN WILL BUY THEIR GOWNS IN AMERICA

NEWPORT, Aug. 26.—The National lawn tennis tournament at the Casino brought out a splendid representation of the leading society women of Newport. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Oliver Belmont, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. Ogden Mills, Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas, Mrs. Charles de Lorcey Oelrichs and Miss Lota Robinson were among the women present.

The war in Europe which interfered with the receipt of special costumes, sent the women to the boxes in plain morning costumes, with silk sweaters of green and pink and small hats, the predominating features of dress.

As a general movement has been started to purchase women's apparel in this country, several women were interviewed on the subject.

Mrs. J. Gordon Douglas said:

"You can obtain as good costumes here as in Europe at less cost. I am a strong believer in patronizing American costumers. I think others could profit by purchasing at home as I have frequently ascertained."

New Engines of Death Brought Out by War

Outside of the bread and wonderful developments in flying machines, submarines, aeronautics and defensive armament and other major features of modern warfare, there are scores of novelties, so to speak, which are being tried out in the titanic struggle for Old World supremacy.

The thermos bottle, on the scientific principle of it, is used in the Russian army. Each soldier has attached to his twenty-gallon coffee-pot and a kettle of fifty-three-gallon capacity. This kettle is jacketed with glycerine, which keeps the heat in the kettle one contents from six to eight hours after the fire is out. This is the same idea as that of the fireless cooker. So the Russian soldier gets his "villein" hot if it is possible the thing and is all the better fighting man therefor.

Automobile wireless is another up-to-date piece of war equipment. The auto has telescopic masts that can be set up in a trice. A separate gasolene motor drives a generator which creates an electric current. The wireless ittle trained soldier, who in this case is also a wireless operator, sets up his traveling wireless outfit on the field or hilltop, gets his current sawing and flashes out wireless information to his field headquarters.

FIELD TELEGRAPH.

Homing pigeons, trained to military service, are part of every European army corps' equipment. In the Franco-Prussian war pigeons carried thousands of messages out of Paris. Since then the practical value of these winged messages has been carefully utilized. The carrier birds are in charge of the engineering corps. They are drilled daily. They start, fly and alight on signal.

The field telegraph and telephone service has reached the highest practical development in a container, weighing 44½ pounds and the size of a large field glass. Insulated field wire, which weighs only 75 pounds to the mile, is unreeled from an auto or from horseback—or if necessary—is carried by a soldier. The wire is carried right up to the firing line in some cases. A steel rod thrust into the ground establishes a station, with the aid of the battery apparatus in the field-glass container. The soldier telegrapher or talks back along the wire direct to his chief.

DEATH BY POISONED AIR.

Even the time-honored—or time-dishonored—hand grenade has been improved and now up-to-date. There is one which can be fired from a howitzer over a two-yard range. It explodes whenever it strikes and lets wholesale death loose. It scatters 245 bullets over an area of 100 square yards. The effect of such a weapon on a compact body of men may be imagined.

The Germans have invented a bomb for aeroplanes now while lets out clouds of dense smoke as it drops through the air. The smoke is supposed to form a blind above which the aviator may daft away to safety, screened from the bullets of sharpshooters on the ground.

Another deadly bomb is loaded with 150 pounds of chemicals which are planned to poison the air upon explosion of the bomb, with poisonous gases, so that life cannot exist within 150 yards of the infernal contrivance.

AIRSHIP GUN IS NEW.

The airship gun is an ordnance development, made necessary by the new factor of the flying machine. These guns, vicious quick firers, are mounted on trucks, so arranged that their muzzles can be elevated in a sharp upward angle, perpendicular to the earth if necessary.

The Germans, with their Teutonic thoroughness, have carried the airship gun still further, having invented a machine gun for submarines that folds down inside the hull of the submarine, like a big disappearing gun on fort or battleship.

There are numerous other devices which are jealously guarded by the respective nations which happen to enjoy possession of them. The Germans are particularly rich in scientific devices on account of the thoroughness of their army methods, their high scientific and technical training and the government stimulus toward war inventions.

BRITISH SOLDIERS COOL AND STEADY IN THE TRENCHES

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The correspondent of the Central News at Paris sends the following:

"I have been talking with British officers from the front, who tell of the coolness and daring of the British soldiers in the fighting around Mons.

"The shooting of the British infantrymen on the firing line was wonderful. Every time a German's head showed above a trench and every time the German infantry attempted to rush a position there came a steady, withering rifle fire from the khaki-clad men lying in extended formation along the wide battle front.

"When quick action was necessary, the men showed no nervousness, no trace of fear, but showed cool, methodical efficiency, for which the British army is noted.

"If the Germans lost heavily, the Germans must have lost terribly. One of the German prisoners said: 'We had never expected anything like it; it was staggering.'"

EMPRESS OFFERS UP THANKS FOR VICTORY

By FREDERICK WERNER
American Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen and London, Aug. 26.—The fall of Namur was announced here today and greeted with rejoicing.

"All is going well with the imperial army," said an official statement issued by the War Office. "Our troops are meeting with steady success. The French have been pressed out within a short time, will shall be through their lines and near Paris."

When Empress Augusta Victoria learned of the German victory at Namur she exclaimed:

"Then may all be content. I have three sons in the army."

Though her health has been poor during several months, the Empress is now informed of all the army movements by the official dispatches being sent to her.

REPORT GERMANY HOPES FOR EARLY END OF HOSTILITIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—From a high diplomatic source, now closely associated with Germany, Bernard Ridley, the German ambassador, it is learned that Germany hopes for an early peace. This hope is pinned on the German victory, the arms now the French announced yesterday, and the belief that England will not send France crushed again as in 1870, to the Germans.

"The German vote that have great neutral power—the United States, of course—will offer mediation, which will be accepted by England and forced on the Allies. Then we offer the German diplomats believe will result in a general armistice and a world congress for peace.

"The German terms could be framed in a short time."

GERMANS TO USE OSTEND AS BASE FOR RAID ON ENGLAND

ANTWERP, Aug. 26.—According to prominent Belgian military authorities, the Germans are planning to use Ostend as a base of operations against England. They say the movement to that port was dictated by naval as well as military considerations.

WHEAT SALES TO EUROPE IS A GOOD SIGN

By W. H. ROSS.
Financial Editor.

"Talk of reopening stock exchanges continues, but when the wish will be realized is as much a matter of doubt as it was three weeks ago. The best way to trade in stocks is spreading the country, but governors of stock exchanges are as much disposed to let London take the initiative as ever, if not more so. It is cabled from London that war reports have chilled the ardor somewhat of those who wish to resume business operations. In fact, the situation is about as it has been previously this month.

"Bill exchange is now going on on the increase and there are other encouraging things. There is talk in the Washington conference will solve the cotton problem. Treasury acceptance of cotton warehouse receipts as approved securities puts warehouse receipts on a par with bonds and will permit a national bank to obtain 75 per cent. of the amount of currency instead of the 50 per cent. it would be given if the receipts were put in as class 3 commercial paper.

"Which a Tennessee member asked Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo if there any way in which national bank note issues could be increased, the latter replied: 'The only thing I can think of would be done long ago, the Treasury.'

GRAINS STILL RISING.

When the Chicago market for grains opened today there was heavy buying for resumption on an advance of one cent. Liverpool resulted in some cases rising about five cents. Yesterday's first change in prices was a decline of 1 1/8 to 1 1/4, December at 109 to 108 1/4, and May at 112 to 111 1/4. Corn advanced 5/8 and oats 1/4 at the start. Provisions were steady. There has been buying of wheat for shipment in a few hours in this country by Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Italy and Switzerland, as well as by England and France. All the purchases were made too early in the week to be reported and many to think that the great export business predicted has begun. It was very encouraging to the trade from viewpoint. Shipments of wheat from Atlantic ports yesterday totalled about 200,000 bushels and more than 1,100,000 were shipped from interior points to the Pacific seaboard where it will be forwarded to Europe when ocean freight can be found. The foreign demand for oats is increasing. New York has just shipped 20,000 bushels to France and Belgium, and 470,000 bushels of wheat. Grain and other commodity bills held against exports totalled about $2,000,000. There was free offering also of finance bills. But the firmness of foreign exchange continued, and it remains a very important feature of the situation.

MORE GOLD FOR CANADA.

In spite of the desire of American bankers to hold to all gold in this country, it continues to leak into Canada. Latest engagements total $758,000. Of this amount $250,000 is coin and $500,000 bars. The bars will be placed to the credit of the Bank of England because of money diverted from Canada to countries stranded in Europe. The Bank of England indemnity is gradually getting most of the money abroad for relief purposes. It bought $815,000 yesterday. It is said that arrangements have been made whereby New York bankers will ship $2,000,000 in gold to Ottawa as the first instalment of obligations totalling $82,000,000 which New York city has to meet in London. Most of the debt is due the French and the coin will be credited to the Bank of England for transmission to creditors.

BANKERS IN CONFERENCE.

Conferences of bankers continue in New York, but is is understood that no method of paying American debts in Europe and reestablishing the foreign exchange market upon a satisfactory basis have been decided upon. It is stated, however, that a plan is under consideration. Bankers are trying to ascertain how much American liabilities of this kind amount to in the total. It is supposed to range from $120,000,000 to $150,000,000. But grain and other shipments have already diminished the balance against this country, and the best bankers in the estimated that exportation has already reduced it to about $100,000,000. As to the plan bankers are reported to be discussing, one statement is that it provides that part of debts due the English will be paid in gold, if the rest can be liquidated through a form of credit to be established on this side of the water. There is said to be more demand for American gold in England just now than for American agricultural or other products. In consequence it is believed the British will furnish importations to the lowest possible amount until we have paid obligations in yellow metal, or

CONSOLIDATED MAY REOPEN.

The New York Consolidated Exchange may reopen soon. Its managers are considering a plan for resuming trading which would limit the price range. According to Peter de Agouro the pending proposition is that the minimum should be about 1 per cent. on the average below the July 30 closing quotations, and that all deliveries shall be made the day following and that no margional trading be allowed. If the Consolidated should reopen, it is quite likely that trading would be resumed also on the Broad street curb.

SITUATION AT LONDON.

It is cabled to Hearst newspapers there is less hope in London of a speedy reopening of the stock exchange there. The suggestion which has been most favorably received is to start a fresh account altogether and postpone settlement of the old one until the market reaches a normal basis. It is said that the resolution of the Bank of England to rediscounted has abated to a considerable extent, largely because of the new requirement that holders must give notice the day before the discounting they desire. It is calculated that about $1,500,000,000 pre-moratorium bills were current when banks began discounting.

TRAIN KILLS LOWELL GIRL; THREE ESCAPE

NORTH CHELMSFORD, Aug. 26.—Miss Millicent O. Lynch a sophomore at the State Normal School in Lowell, was caught by the Montreal express on the Stony Brook freight today and instantly killed. Her three companions barely escaped.

Miss Lynch, with the Misses Mary Martin, Bridget O'Connell and Mary Concannon, all of Lowell, were on their way to a canoe on the Merrimack River for a day's outing. They left the carline at North Chelmsford and walked along the river to meet a motor boat. At four were on the trestle when they heard the Montreal express.

Miss O'Connell threw herself from the trestle into the gully over which the road crosses. Miss Martin followed. The Concannon and Lynch girls ran in the same direction as the train. After a few steps Miss Concannon leaped clear to solid ground just as the train thundered by. Miss Lynch kept ahead, racing the train. Another hundred and she would have escaped. Before she could get clear of the gully over which the road crosses the side of the engine caught her, tossing her several feet, breaking her neck. The engineer collapsed.

Rivadavia Damaged; Postpone Transfer

Another mishap struck the giant battleship Rivadavia today when the officers noticed Mayor Curley's office that plans for a reception to the officers of the ship are off because one of the vessel's turbines has been damaged. Fitzgerald Tells How War May Boom Business of Port

Following is some "war wisdom" given by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, as chairman of the Foreign Trade Committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce:

The war has opened a gateway through which we can derive a flood of business from Europe and South America.

The New England business man knows that the old export policy of waiting for the buyer to come to him is out of date.

Some of the most thorough and up-to-date exporters in this country are New England concerns.

Branch banks should be established in South America and the merchant marine rehabilitated so as to develop an American atmosphere in importing trading centres.

Right now is the time.

Suffragists Will Speak at Carnival

Auto Runs Wild on West Newton Street

While driving along West Newton street today the driver of an auto owned by John B. Donovan of No. 14 Lindsey street, Dorchester, lost control of the machine, which ran up onto the sidewalk and narrowly escaped several persons. The car then tore away a fifteen-foot section of an iron fence, started to climb up the stairs of a building, came back and bumped into a tree. The driver escaped unhurt.

"DAREDEVIL" LAW TO JUMP FROM AIRSHIP

Rodman Law, who is regarded as the greatest daredevil of the age by those who have seen him, will leap from an aeroplane traveling sixty miles per hour into space at an altitude of 3,000 feet at the Rockingham Park next week.

Law's occupation is leaping from the tops of skyscrapers 500 or 600 feet in the air and riding motorcycles going a mile a minute through open drawbridges has finally selected the most amazing stunt of all.

He has already made one leap and was successful, but remarkable jumpers say he takes a terrible chance because of the high speed of the aeroplane. His parachute is fastened to the bottom of the aeroplane and when he leaps into space the weight of his body breaks it from its fastenings. If everything works right he should open when he has fallen 200 or a thousand feet.

Ruth Bancroft Law, his sister, will operate the Wright biplane. She is an expert aviatrix, and so great is her brother's confidence in her that he will make the jump only if she is guiding the plane.

Law came here from New York yesterday, and when he discovered that the police were guarding the entrance to the Custom House tower he decided to postpone his attempt to make a parachute jump from the peak of the tower.

P. A. jams joy in jimmy pipes

YOU never smoked tobacco in your life that hits your taste and punches in satisfaction like Prince Albert. It's the high spot any old way you hook it up, via a jimmy pipe or rolled into a makin's cigarette! You never did roll a cigarette that can compare with P. A. makin's, because no other tobacco ever was like it. Just got the "more-ish" earmarks in every puff, because the patented process cuts out the bite.

Every pipe's a jimmy pipe if it's packed with P. A.

PRINCE ALBERT
the national joy smoke

Men everywhere smoke P. A. in a pipe and rolled into cigarettes. Wise up that it is the goods—signed, sealed, delivered! Or you can lay a bet it wouldn't hit the fancy of such a bunch of red-blooded men.

Sooner you lay a dime against a tidy red tin of P. A. sooner you'll get yours! It's simply a question of time when you'll sit on the P. A. band wagon and sound the cymbals! Get it your mind and let some P. A. sunshine into your system!

Prince Albert is sold all along the line. Beat it around the corner and get yours. Because it's a bad noise to tease your smokappetite so. Toppy red bags, 5c (handy for rolling 'em); tidy red tins, 10c; also handsome pound and half-pound humidors.

MR. W. R. HEARST'S ATTITUDE ON THE U. S. SENATORSHIP

"There Are No Circumstances That I Can See That Call for My Political Activity—Ambassador Gerard Is Mentioned; If He is Nominated I Shall Support Him Most Enthusiastically. Mr. Glynn Has Made an Unusually Good Governor."

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25, 1914.

I said before leaving New York that I was not a candidate for Senator and would not be, unless called upon to make a fight in the public interest, either in behalf of some vital cause or in opposition to some evil condition.

There are no circumstances that I can see that call for my political activity.

Ambassador Gerard is mentioned as the candidate of the Democracy for United States Senator. I consider him an exceedingly fine man, and I am sure he would make an admirable Senator. If he is nominated I shall support him most enthusiastically.

Governor Glynn, it is believed, will receive the Democratic nomination for Governor. Mr. Glynn has made an unusually good Governor. No Governor of New York in my time has done more for the people. No Governor has succeeded in securing the adoption of a greater number of important progressive measures. No Governor has shown more sound sense and practical executive ability in the conduct of his office. Governor Glynn is quiet and conservative in his methods, but radical in his results.

It is always a serious mistake for the public not to reward faithful service and re-elect valuable officials. I shall support Governor Glynn in the firm conviction that in supporting him I am doing the best thing for the people of New York.

I shall also support the Democratic National Administration as far as I possibly can. I am not in accord with many of the National Administration's policies, but I believe that in times of stress it is a citizen's duty to sustain the government of the nation, to strengthen it with good advice rather than to hamper it even with just criticism. We must have this present National Administration for two years more. We should, therefore, endeavor to make the best of it and to secure the most good from it for the benefit of our country.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

FIN. COM. GIVES MAYOR BLAME IN 'DODGING LAW'

Mayor Curley has received from the Finance Commission a letter giving details of a transaction whereby, it charges the Penal Institutions Department bought by oral contract for the city paid for mach nery at a higher price than the lowest bids.

The Finance Commission quotes testimony given by Penal Institutions Commissioner Gore before the commission and says:

"If Commissioner Gore is correct in his recollection, he places the blame for this seeming violation of the law upon his honor."

The two bids of importance in the Finance Commission investigation are the American Laundry Machinery Company bid of $5,700 and the Poland Laundry Machinery Company at $5,977. Last April these and other bids were rejected.

Then, says the Finance Commission in its communication to the Mayor:

"Since the date of the rejection of these bids Mr. Gore has given oral orders to the Poland Laundry Machinery Company for the furnishing of laundry machinery in the amount of $2,117.50, and on June 12, 1914, the commissioner requested permission of the Mayor to award a contract without advertising for one Royal calender flat work ironer to the Poland Laundry Machinery Company in the sum of $2,800, a total of $4,917.50.

Big Rush of Work in Cartridge Plant

LOWELL, Aug. 26.—The United States Cartridge Company of this city is working night and day because of orders that have been received, or anticipated orders. Superintendent Hoxie of the factory would give no reason for this unusual activity, but did say: "It is true that we have been working overtime." The company refuses to say for what country the orders have come.

'MODEL MAID' OPENS SEASON AT MAJESTIC

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"An American musical comedy, The Model Maid,' about Americans, for Americans, by Americans." This is the way Philip Bartholomae announces his latest production, which opened the regular season of the Majestic Theatre last night. Bartholomae wrote the book and lyrics, Silvio Hein composed the music, and the author-producer has staged it.

If the walking delegate of the chorus girls' union gets around to Mr. Bartholomae's show she is liable to address him feverishly, for she has had the courage to put on a musical comedy and pass up the chorus.

In place of the merry merry, he has a long list of principals, and none of them is too proud to support anybody else's musical number by going through the regulation chorus business. And as there are eight girls in the cast, all with important parts, and as they are all pretty and clever, and as they are on the stage all the time, perhaps the absence of the chorus is not such a loss.

MUSIC IS CATCHY.

In regard to the piece, it has the makings of a ripping fine show. By omitting four or five of the twenty-one musical numbers, and biting large chunks out of the first act, Mr. Bartholomae will have enough left to satisfy the most exacting audience.

Silvio Hein's music is not ambitious. He does not attempt the Wagnerian manner, like some of the Viennese comic opera composers. Sometimes his tunes seem strangely familiar. Nevertheless, his music is catchy, has a swing to it, and is very likely to tickle the popular palate.

In the play there is an Italian duke who is over here to catch an heiress. He is the hero. A romantic heiress who pretends to be a parlor maid and wins the duke's heart, despite her disguise, is the heroine. But there are six or seven other love affairs almost equally important. Here is where the girls come in.

And what a dainty and fascinating bevy they are, these chorus principals, each an individual type, and each with much to do. They are Helen Lee, Elsie Hitz, Geraldine Blair, Gwennllyan Jocelyn and Gladys Bell, all good actresses.

Florence Mackie, a sweet and pretty little Boston girl, plays the maid. She sings excellently, and when disguised talks with a brogue that is very well done. Although only a short time on the stage, she is perfectly at ease. Her methods suggest Julia Sanderson.

SEVERAL SONG HITS.

Alice Hegeman, as Anastasia, a spinster, has one of those eccentric parts in which she has no competitor. Her humor is irresistible. Rae Howdin, as a fresh servant girl, displayed unusual comedy talent.

Anna Wheaton is a lively and attractive member of the company and sings very sweetly.

The cast is weak in its male members. Joseph Lertora plays the Italian duke with considerable skill, but he cannot sing, and it is unpleasant to hear him fake his numbers. Donald Macdonald dances well and is a conventional juvenile. None of the other men attract any attention.

The song hits, "I Love You, Dear," "Gentle Moon," "Little Girl, What Have You Done to Me?" "Cherries Are Ripe."

The settings are sumptuous and unusual. A dream scene in the first act brings the members of the company upon the stage out of the orchestra pit instead of the wings. There are other surprising bits of business.

Parsons of the editorial staff of the Christian Science Publisher and Miss Miriam Allen deFord, writer and contributor to Ford Hall Folks, will speak on suffrage at an open air meeting at the Cypress street playground in Brookline this evening. COTTON LOSES OUT IN BATTLE WITH LANGFORD

By JACK CONWAY.

SAM LANGFORD will be able to eat chicken and pork chops and drive around in high-powered automobiles for some time to come. The famous Cambridge negro is not worrying today about going back to a bean diet or of being forced to do his traveling in a Bancroft Electric, as he proved that he is still almost as good as ever when he knocked out George "Kid" Cotton, the dusky Pittsburgh gladiator, in four rounds at the Atlas A. A. last night.

Langford fought a rushing, tearing battle and easily crushed his opponent under a fierce avalanche of smashing left and right-hand punches. Sam was also surprisingly fast on his feet and showed some of that fine flat-footed work which characterized his boxing a few years ago.

COTTON was outclassed but he put up a game battle. He never had a chance of winning but he kept fighting back for all that he was worth until Langford sent him to the canvas for the count in the fourth session.

The end was not unexpected. Langford had been doing virtually all of the forcing and Cotton was trying to protect himself by pushing out his long left hand. After the men had been fighting but a short time in the fourth chapter, Langford cornered the Pittsburgh negro and shot four or five terrific short punches to Cotton's stomach. Cotton doubled up and as he did so Sam landed a left hand blow on his opponent's jaw and followed this with a right hand punch to the same spot. Cotton fell to the mat in a heap and as Langford was rushing forward he was obliged to jump over the "Kid." Referee Jack Sheeman then went through the ceremony of counting Cotton out. It was needless to do so as Cotton was gone and had enough of Langford's game for one night at least.

THE tussle was witnessed by close to 4,000 "fans," the majority of whom were anxious to give Langford the once over. They were desirous of finding out whether Langford was still the terrible greased piece of fighting machinery. And they all went home with the opinion that it will take a great fighter to beat the "Stone Crusher."

Langford and Cotton both entered the ring at the same time. Sam wore his famous green bathrobe which has been placed on exhibition in almost all of the big cities of the world. Samuel was followed by George Beyers and Joe Hicks who seconded him during the whirl. The "Tar Baby" was adorned with a new pair of green tights, while he had a red, white and blue ribbon around his waist. Perhaps Sam was eager to prove that Jack Johnson is not the only patriotic fighter in captivity.

COTTON was togged out similar to Langford with the exception of the bathrobe. They must have sold out all the green robes in Pittsburgh for the "Kid" was obliged to cover his big limbs with one of another hue.

Langford looked in perfect condition when he got ready for action. His muscles were supple, while he only carried a pound or two of superfluous flesh. Cotton also looked the part of a fighter. He is a tall, rangy fellow but, of course, has not the wonderful chest and shoulder development that Langford is blessed with.

THE "Tar Baby" started to fight at a merry clip in the opening stanza. He took the aggressor and forced Cotton to give ground. Sam did his best work at close quarters where he landed his short, rib-smashing jolts. Cotton tried his level best to keep at long range where he could score better with his left, but Langford persisted in getting in close where he hammered away at Cotton's stomach with left and right hand blows. The Cambridge man occasionally rocked Cotton with a punch to the jaw but he devoted the greatest part of his time to volleying away at the Pittsburgh fighter's mid-section.

LANGFORD had the first round by a large margin and it was evident in this early stage in the fracas that "Ho Ho" would win inside of the limit. The second frame was almost a repetition of the first. Langford was the aggressor all the time and did most of the scoring. Cotton fought back gamely and landed a number of telling blows, but Langford would not be denied and kept boring in. Sam also had the best of the going in the third session. This came the fourth stanza and the big slams which sent Cotton down for the count.

Joe Woodman, Langford's manager, informs us that Sammy is now ready to receive callers and that he would be pleased by a visit from "Gunboat" Smith.

THE preliminary boys furnished a plenty of entertainment. Dan McDonald, the Halifax light heavyweight, knocked out Joe Geary of Roxbury in four rounds in the semi-final contest. It was a rough and ready fight but McDonald was the sweet a puncher for Geary. He ended the "go" in the fourth session with a left hand swing on the stomach followed by a right hand blow which landed on the point of Geary's jaw.

Johnny Fallon of Roxbury and Johnny Murphy, who comes from South Boston, fought another draw. Fallon had a good sized shade in his favor in the opinion of the writer. Johnny Noonan of Roxbury stopped Pat Gendron, who hails from Attleboro, in five rounds in the other preliminary contest.

EDDIE MURPHY of South Boston and Matty Baldwin, the husky Charlestown lightweight, will meet in the feature event of twelve rounds next Tuesday night. The bout will be for the championship of New England.

DOUBLES TITLE IS STILL HELD BY COAST PAIR

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 26.—Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, the coast tennis stars, are still national champions in the doubles, having successfully defended their title against George Meyer Church and Dean Mathey, the Princeton College stars.

The Tiger pair fought hard, but they were no match for the three-times national champions and lost in straight heats.

The contest was a replica of last year's match, the challengers attempting to win through to victory via the Bundy route, and finding the little general of the coast, although weak at the start and in individual games thereafter, strong and clever enough to defeat them single-handed.

Bundy had a few bad relapses, but on the whole, played sterling tennis, driving more than in the international match, lobbing effectively and playing a sure game overhead.

Dedham K. of C. Plans Field Day of Sports

The Dedham Council, Knights of Columbus, have arranged a long athletic program for the field day at Stone Park, Dedham, Labor Day. The events are open to all and includes 100-yard dash, 440, 880, mile run, high jump, broad jump and relay race, open to teams of four men. Entries are to be made with Edward J. Keelan, Jr., No. 41 Dwight street, Dedham.

There will also be races for boys and girls under sixteen years, consisting of 50-yard dash, potato race, egg and spoon race and others.

Two ball games have been scheduled to take place, the first in the morning between Hyde Park and Dedham Councils of the Knights and another in the afternoon when the Dedham A. A. and the Dedham Knights of Columbus will decide the championship of the town.

Track & Field

The Dedham Knights of Columbus have arranged an athletic card to be held in connection with their annual field day in Stone Park, Dedham, Labor Day. The events include a 100-yard dash, 440, 880, mile run, running high jump, broad jump and relay races. It is expected that many of the prominent local athletes will compete.

The breakdown of William Applegrath, the wonderful English runner, caused much grief among the track followers, and especially was he looked for to win the Canadian championships and if the gate of those games could be counted as a sure bet the Englishman was to appear in the national championships to be held in Baltimore.

Alvah Meyer is another well-known athlete, who is reported to give up competition for the remainder of the season because of an accident.

Meyer was severely injured last Saturday when his automobile turned turtle. The Irish-American A. C. of New York had figured on Meyer winning many points at the national championships.

Hemy Senft, of the Knox House is out to win the national tennis championship. Senft, who is now 45 years old, feels that he can regain his title. Smith is running in fast time this year.

The return of Homer Baker from England, where he went to compete in the games connected with the Isthmian races to be held in connection with the Panama Exposition, has aroused much interest in the Dedham race to be held on Labor Day. Baker performed in wonderful style while abroad and won several championships.

Records in short distance swimming events are likely to be established at Point Bonita, Pacific Coast this afternoon, when the Los Angeles A. A. holds its annual meet. Duke Kahanamoku, the world's greatest short distance swimmer, is here and will compete for the Los Angeles club and is expected to run away with the present marks. Kahanamoku is also a sprinter of no mean ability and a larger crowd than usual is expected.

A race, scheduled for the national championships to be held at Baltimore next week, that is already causing speculation is the mile and half-mile event. Homer Baker, Ted Meredith and Mel Sheppard, considered the class of the field, and the race between the two former will be one of the best of the season. All three are capable performers and the winners will have to perform close to record time.

If Norman Taber, the B. A. A. miler, decides to compete in Baltimore he will be the class of the field. He is now training in the Adirondacks for New York running the distance close to record time this season, and is out to win his title this year.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

ONE OF THE FIRST DIVISION CLUBS of the National League is likely to crack the strain. Mclvor has the satisfaction of knowing it will not be the Giants. They cracked long ago.

BOSTON SUPPORTERS MAY TAKE COMfort from the fact that Dick Hoblitzel lost a game to the Cubs. He was certain for a homerun. He hadn't been absent since the first week in July.

THE CARDINALS CLAIM TO HAVE THE youngest player in the big leagues in the person of Cliff Heath. He is a youngster and he is to be given a chance this Fall by Hugo.

"SCRAPPY BILL" JOYCE, WHO ONE time managed the Giants, is reported to have backed up with big money in Cuba. Joe is a scout.

SOME TIME AGO HUB PERDUE SAID he reckoned the change to a St. Louis uniform. Wonder if Hub will stick to that opinion should the Braves be lucky enough to figure in a world's championship series?

FROM CHICAGO IT IS LEARNED THAT the Cubs still believe they will win the National League pennant. O'Day and his men must be admired for their confidence. No team ever had a better chance to take the head from the Giants, but they "blow" their chances. Playing to that sort of form no team could ever hope to win a pennant.

MIKE MOWREY, FORMER THIRD BASEman of the Pirates, is playing with the Chambersburg club, a manufacturing mine in Pennsylvania.

IF JOHN HENRY OF THE SENATORS IS looking for a recommendation he can secure one from the leader of the World's Champions. Mack says that Henry is one of the best all round catchers the game has had in years.

A LOT OF PERSONS WONDER WHY Meinke doesn't use more of his pitchers in a game. They wonder why he doesn't use Schupp to due to the fact that Schupp doesn't seem to have as much control as when he first joined the team several years ago. He has a lot of speed and plenty of "pinches," but his difficulty is his failure to locate the plate. Schaut is just as wild.

* * *

TORONTO BEAT JERSEY CITY BY A score of 20 to 4. Evidently Orioles has become popular once more in the Queen City of the Dominion.

JACK MARTIN, A FORMER BRAVE, HAS blazed the trail in the Phillies' infield recently by the jumping of the ancient Mike Doolan, Hallman had no room for Martin with the great Mauseville in harness, so he traded him to the Quakers for Josh Devore.

* * *

MARTIN HAS FIELDED SPLENDIDLY since joining the Phillies and he has hit the ball hard. He would have been able to help him from the outset of the campaign had he been given a chance. Martin is a fine fielder. In two league games were lost through the error of young Leonard Murphy, whom Martin has since replaced.

Bohemia—The Land of the Richest Hops

AUSTRIA being involved in the present European War, it is not probable that any Bohemian hops will be imported into the United States so long as the war continues.

It is recognized the world over that the Bohemian hops are the finest grown.

Under ordinary conditions they bring a price several times greater than that of American or English hops.

Few American brewers have been willing to incur even the expense of partial use of Bohemian hops.

It has been the policy of the Harvard Brewing Company, however, to use Bohemian hops exclusively in the production of its Harvard Beer, no matter what the expense might be. This accounts in great part for the popularity and rapidly increasing sales of Harvard Beer.

We feel that those who enjoy the delicious flavor that it is possible to produce in Beer only by the use of Bohemia's choicest hops are entitled to know whether the war is to interfere in the least with the exceptional character and flavor of Harvard Beer.

It is a source of great satisfaction to us that we can advise them at this time that without regard to the expense we have stored sufficient quantities of the richest Bohemian hops in our immense hop vaults at the Harvard Brewery to last us for many months to come.

We know that it will be welcome news to those who have experienced the exquisite enjoyment of the delicious and exceptional flavor of Harvard Beer, either on draught or in bottles, that we are to be in position indefinitely to continue to use the world's choicest hops in production of this product.

BRAVES HAVE NEW CHANCE TO BEAT OUT GIANTS IN BIG FIGHT FOR FIRST POSITION

THIS IS THE DAY THAT DECIDES BRAVES' FATE

WHAT MAY HAPPEN TODAY.

If the Braves win and the Giants lose twice, the Braves will be first, half a game ahead of the Cardinals, who lead the Giants by a full game.

If the Braves lose and the Giants win twice, the Cardinals will lead by half a game, while the Braves will be two games and a half ahead of the Cardinals.

or the Braves win and the Cardinals and Giants break even, the Braves will be in first place, half a game ahead of the Giants and a game and a half to the front of the Cards.

If the Braves lose and the Giants lose twice the Cardinals will take the lead, half a game ahead of the Braves, will to turn lead the Giants by half a game.

If the Braves lose and the Giants win twice the Braves will be second, a game and a half back of the Giants and a game and a half ahead of the Cardinals.

If the Braves lose and the Cards and Giants break even, the Braves will be second, half a game behind the Giants and half a game ahead of the Cardinals.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Another win for the sensational Braves today and they stand an excellent chance of going into undisputed lead of the hectic struggle in the National League.

While the Braves are carded for their final game of the year in Chicago, the Giants are booked for a double-header in St. Louis. If the Braves win and the Giants break even, the Boston lads take the lead.

There is just one way by which the Giants can cheat the Braves should the latter win, and that is by grabbing both battles of their double-header.

Should the rain continue in St. Louis and the games be called off on account of it, then the Braves would still top them all. Providing, of course, that they win.

NARROWEST OF LEADS.

The climbers are within a single point of the Giants today. It is only a vagary of the percentage column that holds them from a real as well as a practical tie. For while the men of Stallings have lost one more game than those of McGraw, they likewise have won one more.

Here's how they stand:

	W.	L.	P.C.
Giants	59	48	.551
Braves	60	49	.550

With this chance in front of them, the Boston battlers are certain to fight. It's likely that the veteran Otto Hess will start. If he doesn't, it will be George Tyler. It is almost certain to be a left-hander, for both Evers and Stallings are confident that a southpaw will prove the nemesis of the Chicago outfit. The old side-winder has pitched many a corking game against the crew of O'Day, in fact ever since his arrival in the league he has had the number of the Cubs.

CUBS OUTCLASSED.

The Braves yesterday nursed the idea that they might be judged in Chicago by the game they played on Monday. They didn't want the local fans to believe that was their true form and they set about to correct the impression.

They succeeded all right. Not only did they beat the Cubs 4 to 1, but they showed the Chicago fans just how the game should be played.

For instance, they showed what hitting in the pinches will do. It's true that the best score shows that the Cubs got one more hit than did the Braves. But what it doesn't show is this:

Most of the Cub hits were made when there were none on.

Most of the Boston hits were made when there were pals waiting to be scored.

You know the result. Four to one.

"RABBIT" ON JOB.

Maranville pulled off a stunt that hadn't been done but once before this year. Then it was also performed by Maranville. That was the throwing out of Wilbur Good on a double play. On Monday Good forced Leach at second and was doubled at first. The play was James to Maranville to Schmidt. It was the combination who hustled the ball. It's only about once or twice a year that Good is doubled. It's usually Maranville who does it.

Roger Bresnahan discovered that the Braves have many friends in Chicago. In the ninth round Schmidt was on first when Smith put down a bunt. Roger was playing second base and hiked over to take the throw. Vaughn threw badly and when Roger saw that Smith was safe and might go to second, gave him a push. Whereupon the local fans hissed Roger.

They don't care about seeing those Braves mistreated. They are pulling for them here.

Final Swimming Meet for the Title

The final swimming meet, embracing all the winners in the preliminary meets held throughout the city, will be held in Charles River Basin on Saturday.

Owing to the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union, which prohibit mixed competition, the girls' meet will be held Saturday morning at 10:30 and the boys' meet Saturday afternoon at 3. Handsome gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded by the Park and Recreation Department.

The feature event will be the relay race representing the various beaches throughout the city in both junior and senior divisions.

Marshfield's Great Fair Opens Today

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 26.—The forty-eighth annual exhibition of the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society and fair and horse show, opens today. The horse show, under the management of A. W. Davis, is a new attraction for the fair this year.

The trotting stakes are large and the list of entries the biggest in the history of the society. Charles A. Stone has a large collection of Welsh ponies and John J. Dixon of Norwell a collection of Shetlands.

112 Entrants in U. S. Golf Title Play

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Including three foreign entrants, one of them from Canada, there are 112 names on the list of entries given out by the United States Golf Association for its twentieth annual national amateur championship golf tournament which will begin next Monday and continue until Saturday, September 5, on the links of the Ekwanok Country Club, Manchester, Vt.

King Couchman Wins $5,000 Ft. Erie Race

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 26.—King Couchman won the $5,000 stake for 2:11 pacers, the feature of the opening of the Grand Circuit meeting at the Fort Erie track.

The Chamber of Commerce stake winner was much the best of a big field which started and won in straight heats. It was a day of straight heat racing, the four races being raced in only one more than the minimum number of heats necessary.

The only unfortunate occurrence was an accident in the final heat of the day in which the trotting gelding Robert Milroi was so badly injured that he may not race again.

McNamara Is Second in Minneapolis Golf

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 26.—George O. Simpson of Omaha, Neb., was the star in the Interlachen Country Club open tournament of the Western Golf Association, making the first half of the 72-hole course in 148, two strokes below par.

His score was one stroke under that of Tom McNamara of Boston, and two strokes under the scores of J. M. Barnes, Philadelphia, and Herbert Strong, Long Island, who tied for third place with 148.

KRAMER HOLDS SHIFT OF BIKES CAUSED DEFEAT

Frank Kramer, American champion, has an alibi today for his defeat last evening by "Big Alf" Grenda, the Tasmanian woodchopper, in the international sprint match at Revere. Grenda defeated Walter Rutt of Germany, sprint champion of the world, and Al Goulette of Austria, who finished in a tie for third.

Grenda won two heats and one second for 11 points. Kramer had one first, a second and a third for 9 points. Rutt and Goulette shared the other 10 points.

Kramer had a tire punctured in the final heat and used a low geared wheel as a substitute, which he claims was responsible for his defeat.

Jim Moran surprised and pleased his friends by winning the 25-mile paced race. Percy Lawrence was three-quarters of a lap behind. Frank Corry was third and Maduro fourth, almost two miles behind.

The victory permits him to start in the American 50-mile championship next Saturday night.

The summary:

Half-Mile Amateur Handicap—Won by H. Johns (30); second, Bert Jones (50 yds.); third, Jo. O. Rollins (scratch). Time—1m. 5s.
Two-Mile Professional Open—Won by Ted Lewis; second, H. Rollins; third, Time—4m. 15 1-5s.
International Match Race, Mile Heat.
First Heat—Won by Kramer; Grenda, second; Rutt, third; Goulette, fourth. Time—2m. 42 1-5s.
Second Heat—Won by Grenda; Goulette, second; Kramer, third; Rutt, fourth. Time—2m. 3 1-5s.
Third Heat—Won by Grenda; Kramer, second; Rutt, third; Goulette, fourth. Time—2m. 58 2-5s.
Fireside Amateur Open—Won by F. Herbert T. Sullivan, second; W. Turville, third; F. Brolasch, fourth. Time—11m. 25 4-5s.

The best Captain John E. Parker, also of the Bay State aggregation, on a longer string of consecutive bulls' eyes.

The Fifth Massachusetts won the Cruikshank match with 548.

TIGERS OPEN FINAL SERIES HERE TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Now for the last chance to see the Tigers this season. The Detroit club is here, hopelessly out of the pennant race—as indeed it may be said every club except the Athletics is—but still able to make things interesting for the "fans."

The mighty Ty has not been hitting the ball as well as usual, but that's all right; he can hit 'em and with more than forty games yet to be played in the American League schedule the celebrated Georgian will probably be found leading the league as usual when the final count is taken.

The Carrigan tribe dropped the last game of the series to the Naps yesterday simply because they couldn't hit Willie Mitchell's pitching. Carrigan did all he could to make it three straight for the Red Sox, changing pitchers, putting in pinch hitters and coaching vociferously from third base box, but he couldn't land the goods.

Now that the Tigers are here Uncle Bill will doubtless turn Ray Collins loose. The Vermont left-hander has usually been successful against the men managed by Hugh Jennings.

Carrigan wants all the games he can get and so do the players with him. On Carrigan's showing with the Red Sox this year depends his salary for next season. The players who have not yet signed are anxious to bang out the safe hits and do some brilliant fielding so that contracts calling for big figures will be mailed to them next Winter if not before.

The weather has been fine for baseball lately and surprisingly large crowds have turned out. The game today begins at 2:15 o'clock.

The Only Loss That Is Real Calamity Is the Loss of Self-Respect

CHAPTER XXXVI.

SOME of the moments that are like hours followed John Hale's appeal to Constance Medford. To the man they were long; to the girl they seemed an eternity. She was silent, not from obstinacy, but from actual inability to express herself. The fact that in justice to others she could not speak the truth held her dumb. She had grown very pale, and a great pity for her moved her companion. He longed to draw the lonely girl to him and tell her that he wanted to help her. Of course she had lost all self-control for a moment, yet she was sorry for it now.

But his kindly impulses received a shock when, as he repeated, "I am sure you are sorry now," the girl said resolutely:

"I am sorry to displease you, uncle. But I cannot blindly say that I will grant my action."

John Hale started to his feet in astonishment. "Constance!" he gesticulated. "You will please give me a satisfactory explanation of that speech!"

"No, Uncle," Constance said, rising, too. "I am afraid my explanation would not be satisfactory to you, yet it is the only one I can give."

"I insist upon hearing it, whatever it is!" he demanded.

The girl dropped her eyes. "I will tell you all that I feel that I can," she said. As she stood before her questioner, her hands tightly clasped, the fingers interlocked, she looked like a frightened yet unrepentant child. "Others will tell you more if they wish. All I can say is that Edith thinks I have been anxious to have her engaged to Mr. Medford instead of Ralph, and that I like Tom and do not like Ralph."

Her uncle regarded her incredulously. "And for that association from Edith—a silly notion, perhaps, but surely not an offense—you —you ordered a loving girl from your room to suffer alone, when she broke down and called to telling me of it in my office this afternoon. Yes, she did tell me. My God! I never knew Edith to show as much hurt and resentment as she displayed in telling me of this matter. And I questioned her as to details she referred me to you!"

Constance raised her head and looked him squarely in the eyes. "And I," she said, "in my turn refer you to her."

A SURPRISE

Before she could guess the man's intention, he strode to the door, and opening it called Edith. The maid-servant answered so promptly that Constance wondered if she had been waiting at the head of the stairs. She came down immediately, and, as her father closed the door behind her, glanced at him inquiringly. She did not look in Constance's direction.

"What is it, father?" she asked, her voice was hard and her eyes cold.

"Sit down, darling," her father said. Then, as an after-thought, he suggested, "Sit down, Constance." Wearily he took his own chair at his desk.

"Daughter," he said, "you have never lied to me nor dissembled me in all your life. I want you to tell me now what took place in Constance's room this afternoon."

The reply was an abrupt question. "Hasn't Constance told you?"

"She has," the parent informed her, "that you accused her of a partiality for Tom and of a desire to have you marry Tom rather than Ralph. Is that what you said to her?"

"It is a part of what I said to her," Edith replied. "But I told her the whole truth, or as much as I had courage to tell. I want to obey you, Father, but all I can bring myself to tell you is that I did accuse Constance of being Tom's ally, of wanting him to marry me—for reasons which I stated—of— Oh, Dad! I can't go on with the disgraceful story! I ordered her from her room!"

"Great Heavens," the man looked appalled. "Edith, my darling, I beg you to dismiss yourself to speak calmly—where did you learn all this story?"

"From someone who knows the truth and spoke it," she replied.

"From Ralph, I suppose." Mr. Hale rephrased. "Then he shall give me facts."

MORE DETAILS

"Father," Edith pleaded, as Ralph is a gentleman and Tom certainly would hardly be fair to question him. But I as his fiancee have a right to say what I know. I asked Constance to write and tell Tom that I did not want to see him. She said she would, but thought it mere assault. Now I learn that on that very day she got a telegram from him, and that the latter she pretended to write at my request was really an answer to that telegram. I suppose she told him she regretted my treatment of him, and that she was still his friend." She paused, breathless with indignation.

"How do you know she got a telegram from Tom?" Mr. Hale demanded.

"Because," the girl hesitated, "Ralph —Peter—Ralph's man, you know—was passing at that time. He recognized her boy hand the yellow envelope to Constance, and mentioned this to Ralph. She stood in the shelter of the trees and read it, later, as Ralph went to the office for a sense of the wire that had been delivered to his mother by phone the night before he asked casually if any message had come to this place from Tom Morton. You see, Ralph knows the operator well, and he learned that a message had come addressed to Miss Medford, of course, Ralph was too honorable to ask what the telegram said."

Mr. Hale laughed harshly. "The same considerations might have kept him from prying into the matter at all, or learning the contents of the telegraph company from talking of that about which he supposed to be honor bound to keep silent. But all is fair in love and war, and this seems to be both. However, that is a question I will try to set at the girth about the first matter you bring. My dear," turning to his niece, "was the telegram you received from Tom of a private nature?"

"Yes, sir," the girl replied, without looking at the questioner.

"Did it pertain to Chinese affairs?"

"Yes, sir."

A pained look came to the man's face. "Did you," he inquired gravely, "reply to that telegram?"

"Yes, sir," Constance responded in a dull tone.

"Was the nature of that reply confidential?"

"Yes, it was!" his niece's girl exclaimed, springing to her feet. "I cannot tell you anything more, and I declared abruptly. "Uncle, I will not! I will not! I will not!" Her voice broke. "Oh, please, please don't question me!" Her voice broke. "Oh, please, please don't question me!" She turned and fled from the room and upstairs.

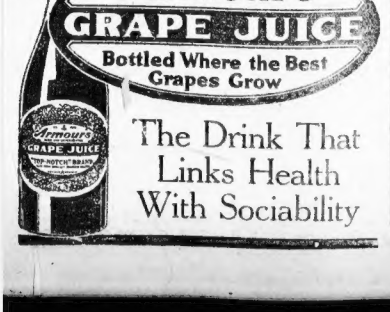
"The Wa.r of Eternal Youth"

The beauties of the Austrian court used a lotion which as a chemist in testing the two smooth and free from wrinkles, even in age, the name is "the water of eternal youth."

Some one recently has divulged the secret of this wonderful, though exceedingly simple, wrinkle lotion, which in her gratitude she has gladly shared with a newspaper of wrinkles that spring from alkaline poisoning. Ordinary lime water which all these people buy at the drug store. And women can get these ingredients for a few cents from their druggist, mix them together, and bathe the face with entire safet. To bathe the face in the same lotion banishes wrinkle, sallow skin of the deeper wrinkles and furrows. This is also effective for hanging cheeks and double chin.—ADVERTISEMENT.



The Drink That Links Health With Sociability

Swimming as a Health Key

A Girl Champion Tells How She Learned to Perfect Herself in Water Sports

Miss May Nerich in a Diving Pose.

MAY NERICH, of the Woman's National Life saving League, is a swimmer in a family of swimmers. Cup collecting and medal winning have descended as an art from a twenty-year-old brother to eighteen-year-old Meg, and now Catherine, aged fourteen, and Frances, a wee girl of eight, are beginning to display similar talent by feats in the water.

Naturally the only form of exercise May Nerich takes is swimming and its sister art—diving. She is a busy, active girl, but she has not or compelled to undress work or wrap up because of the winds of Winter, and Summer's greatest humidity does not wear out her nerves and energy.

This is the way the girl champion discusses her favorite diversion:

"When I was a little girl I began to do a little more than wade around in the shallow end of the tank where I went to keep cool in Summer. I would hold on to the steps and paddle a little, and then I thought maybe I could swim several strokes. I have been swimming for 12 years now. That is the only form of athletics I know, and it keeps me in splendid condition.

"My ambition is to get to be the champion of the world. I have sought to help me be a real life-saver.

"What swimming has done for my life has been to make me calm and not a bit nervous. I can eat anything. I am always ready to do a day's work and enjoy it.

"I don't think swimming makes you either fat or thin. It keeps you normal. Your muscles develop and your chest gets broad and deep, with room for healthy lungs and deep breathing.

"I never get out of breath running up stairs or dancing. I don't tire easily at work. I don't catch colds, and I am seldom sick at all. I never have indigestion, and I think swimming has done it all. It just makes you perfectly normal, so you can do the work and play you ought to do and enjoy them both.

"No one needs any lessons in swimming. My mother just decided to learn to swim, as father and six of us children—all but the baby—swim, and mother simply got some water wings to hold her up till she got confidence and learned the simple breast stroke. The younger you begin in the water self-confidence you have, and girls and boys grow into active, and perhaps her strength of character has made her forge to the front in swimming circles. But little May Nerich is not to be a successful at whatever she does.

How Much Should a Woman Tell?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I HAVE just received a proposal of marriage from a very nice young man," writes a troubled young woman, "and I accepted. A few evenings later he put a question to me that embarrassed me very much. He asked me regarding my past affairs of the heart. Now that I wish to know is this: Has he any right to ask me such a question when he himself refuses to divulge to me any details of his past life?"

He hasn't the right, but Man, who is spelled every hour of his matrimonially-eligible days, and the climax of this ruining process reached when he proposes, confuses "impudence," with "privilege" and demands as his right to know what which in no way concerns him.

HE TAKES IT

He hasn't the right, but he takes it, and the only way for a woman to meet such an arbitrary demand is to refuse to obey. There should be no compromise; No, "I'll tell you if you will tell me." Or the reason that a man never tells. More experienced, more wary, he always keeps the story of his past loves that is worth keeping in his reserve, and tells his sweetheart some silly little fairy tale of never in his life before having known what Love is.

She, in pure gratitude for being the selection of fate for such honor, pours out the complete story of her past, and if she has done nothing worse all her life than "flirt a bit on Sunday," she enlarges and embellishes that crime, making of herself a double-dyed villain, and really unworthy of the pure spotless love that has just been offered her.

She tells of every innocent little love affair in the past; of Jim who went back on her, and Fred who broke of Tom who was stolen away by a rival, and in the recounting of her heart believes that her confession is the clearing away for a more stable and firmer foundation for this new love to build on.

Theoretically, she is right, but theoretically. Man is a big tender-hearted, whole-hearted creature, dominated solely by the desire to cherish and protect. In fact, as is the evolvement of jealous tyranny. He gives to himself the right to love easily and the right to love often. He goes through an ordeal trying his teeth on Chiclets on every apple he can reach, and demands, when it pleases him to make a selection to have for his own, forgiveness, that the apple be one that was never touched before.

HE IS SELFISH

He demands to be first. He gives a woman his today only, and demands of her her yesterdays, future and tomorrows. Though she did not know him yesterday, he is confident that if she loved some other man yesterday she was false to him.

One must fight fire with fire. For every half confidence, give less than a half. If she should love a better man a year ago pull a club in the hands of her husband which she confesses it. The less you tell the more innocent, and maybe never very deep, but the club is so heavy and wielded as often as though that love had been anything that to the contrary.

"How much should a woman tell?" For the sake of her future peace of mind she should tell—but she'll argues ill for the future when a courtship and honeymoon are spent by either the man or the woman in digging for skeletons.

Doubly Sold

The newly-appointed master at a school had learned all about "pribbed and such little dodges as schoolboys practice and had not forgotten them.

One day, during a lesson in history, he observed one of his pupils take out his watch every minute or two.

He grew suspicious.

Finally he strode between the desks and stopped in front of the boy.

"Let me see your watch," he commanded.

"Yes, sir," was the meek reply.

The master opened the face of the case. He looked inside, but sheepish when he read the single word, "Pooled."

But he wasn't allowed much. He was not to be thrown off the scent so easily.

He opened the back of the case. Then he was satisfied, for he read, "Pooled again!"

Their Married Life

Helen Ventures Downtown in the Heat to Buy a Birthday Present for Warren

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

"MAIN floor, madam. This?" Over to the left." And Helen stepped out of the elevator and made her way toward the counter at the other end of the store. The day had been warm, but there were some things that were absolutely necessary, and Helen had ventured down town in spite of the heat. One thing that could not be postponed was a birthday present for Warren.

She had started out about ten o'clock with a vague idea of buying something that would be a real surprise, but nothing seemed to appeal to her in the light of a difference and she had almost decided to buy a tie and go home, the last one on the list. The crowd was terrible.

Helen had imagined that the stores would be almost deserted, but already the curious were on the lookout for the first glimpse of the Fall styles and every department was filled with a crowd of fashion, chattering women.

Helen reached the tie and looked at several in the case before asking to have any brought out. They seemed to be a monotony in everything. Even the ties showed nothing original. Perhaps there were some but away. Anyway it would do no harm to ask.

"What can I do for you, madam?" asked the clerk, coming up at that moment. "Something in ties? Perhaps you have seen something you liked in the case. Have you looked around?"

"Yes, but I don't like any in the case. Have you anything else?"

"Nothing but what you see, madam. How do you like this one?" bringing out an atrocity in blue and green with an undertone of purple. "These are the very newest things; all the men are wearing them."

"No, I don't want anything so decided. If there are all you have I won't take anything." The clerk put the tie back in the case and regarded her coldly as she walked away.

SHE DECIDES TO REST BEFORE RESUMING HER SEARCH

She decided to rest a few minutes before trying anywhere else, and would have a soda. That would be cooling and give her time to collect her thoughts. Perhaps Warren would like something in the way of soda. Yes, 10 sticks. It was perfectly sure he had everything he needed.

On the corner she encountered a huge crowd—something had evidently happened—but she hurried on without stopping to see what it was. In the little candy store, with an electric fan buzzing soothingly overhead and a frosty drink before her on the little round table, Helen felt so much cooler that she decided to stay down and look at the draperies. They would have to have the living room done over in the Fall, and, after all, there wasn't so much time left before Warren took her West.

She gathered up her things to leave and was sauntering slowly back toward the shopping district when someone behind her said laughingly:

"How lonely I must look. Are you going to make me follow you before you turn around?"

"Bob!" Where are you doing down town on a day like this?"

"I might ask you what you are doing. I should think you would be so furious that you hadn't stayed at the shore that you'd refuse to come in weather would hardly tempt you out to shop."

"What about yourself?" Aren't you planning on staying in the city all Summer just because Bob can't get away?"

"And aren't you here in the city when you might have stayed where you were, just because Warren couldn't stay?" mocked Louise. Helen laughed.

"Well, anyway, I have a perfectly good reason for being downtown. I want to get my husband something really nice for his birthday. By the way, won't you and Bob come up for dinner that night, if you haven't anything else to do?"

"Delighted. I can't think of anything I'd rather do. Bob and I are looking forward to the Fall, when we can go to housekeeping. Of course, everything is simply fine where we are, but I do want a home of my own so badly!"

LOUISE TELLS OF THE GOOD POINTS OF HER HUSBAND

"I do hope you can settle somewhere near us. It must be fun to plan on having everything new to start and to be really starting out in life." Helen said this wistfully, but Louise was so eager to speak that she hardly noticed Helen's manner at all.

"Oh, Helen," she went on, "Bob is such a dear. Do you know, he actually tries to make up to me for staying in the city. As if such a thing were necessary. But he always comes home with plans for week-end trips and all sorts of nice things. Between you and me, Helen, he really spoils me."

Helen tried to smother the little envious pang in her heart. Whenever she or Louise it was never, no matter how hard she tried to reason it away, merely that Louise was the happiest woman in the world. What had she to wish for that she really hadn't have?

And then that little voice would whisper maddeningly: "You miss the little first thrills, the little attentions that you once took as a matter of course, but which are lacking now."

Did she regret anything? Would she have anything different if it were possible for her to pick and choose? Nothing but to have Warren a little more considerate of her feelings, a little more lover-like, a little more like the man she had married, who, although he had always been more dictatorial than Bob, was at one time just as tender, just as attentive.

They had stopped at the store where both did nearly all their shopping.

"Do you mind going upstairs with me, first?" said Louise suddenly. "I have a delicate thing that I came downtown to get, and after that, I can help you with Warren's present if you like."

A few minutes later they were getting off.

"Bob is going to let me be really extravagant for once. I don't let him spoil me like this very often, but I have been wanting this set for ages. It's for my own little boudoir," she explained, "and it's a tea set, pale yellow Limoges. Here it is, isn't it sweet?" And Helen found herself picking out cups and saucers and a cream jug and sugar bowl, while Louise added a lemon dish and a quaint tea pot.

"You must come up often after we are settled, and we'll have tea 'a la Bob' in a hard Winter, and you be scared an' save yo' wages fast an' for the real business of the occasion."

SHE HITS ON JUST THE PRESENT FOR WARREN

"Yes, what do you suppose he'd like?"

"I think I know just the thing. How would a smoking set do? Men always like things like that, and I remember hearing Warren say once that he must get one."

Like a flash Helen remembered the many times Warren had actually expressed a desire for one. That would be just the thing. Besides giving him a present, the gift itself would be something he approved of, something to be appreciated, not just something to say "thank you" for and then forget that you possessed the thing at all.

"Louise, you're a genius really you are. Do you know I have heard Warren speak about that more times than I could count, but I just couldn't remember it at the right time?"

"Bob has one, you know. I think it was over at our house one night last Winter. Won't you get that he wanted one. Here we are! Well, there are enough to choose from, and I'll help you."

"Did you want one with a stand? We have a splendid one over here with a stand attached," volunteered the salesman, as Helen poked curiously into the various belongings of the tray.

"No, not a beauty, Helen. I like the stand ones better, don't you?" called Louise, who was examining the one that the salesman had designated while he pointed out the many advantages.

"Yes; you can send that one and one will finally, after all, be decided on to the completeness and had been assured that there wasn't another like it in the store.

"You're sure he'll like it, Louise? I want him to like it better than any present I have ever given him."

"My dear, I know he'll like it. I'm so sure that if he doesn't I'll be willing to buy it from you to give to Bob. Bob's hasn't a stand, you know, but it's practically the same as that assurance enough for you, isn't it?"

Useless Economy

"Economy has its pains as well as its pleasures," says a Washington preacher, "if the experience of an old darkey of my acquaintance in Virginia counts for anything.

"One Spring, for some reason, Old Moses was going round town with a face of dissatisfaction. When questioned, he poured forth a voluble tale of woe in these terms:

"'Marse Tom, he come to me last Fall an' he say: "'Mose, dey's gwine be a hard Winter, so yo' be keerful an' save yo' wages fast an' good.'

"'An' I believe Marse Tom, yassuh? I believe him, an' I save' an' save, an' when de Winter come it ain't got no hardship, an' dere I was wid all dat money jest thrown on my hands.'"

"There's a Reason"

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight 10 Pounds or More

A Physician's Advice

"I'd certainly go on most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman to whom such a statement is not impossible, despite hard falsification. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which extends the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood and delivered where the demand of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood the fats and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines or are eliminated from the body as waste.

By correcting this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat in the nutrition of the body, be artificially supplied with the elements that build healthy tissue. This can best be accomplished by adding to Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not a fat, the combination or an of the best known to the medical profession, which has the power to assimilate with the food and turns the sugars and starches into body fat. Sargol is a treatment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effects are remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a few months are made by no means infrequent. Yet the action is harmless and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists under guarantee and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervousness, indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not be used by those whose flesh producing effect, be used by those in whom it is desired to increase their weight too pounds or more.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The United States Will Dominate the World—a Tariff Never Thought of Will Force a Prosperity Never Seen

The Americans, While Building Up Their Own Marvelous Prosperity in the Opportunity of War, Will Benefit All of the World's Nations.

"In the first place, the war will undo many of the mistakes of our Democratic party. It will, for a time at least, restore a protective tariff.

"It will operate to keep the products of some European nations out of our country and it will enlarge our home markets to our home producers.

"Within the next few months, or even weeks, the mills and factories all over the United States will be humming in an effort to provide sufficient products to supply the demands of our home markets.

"People who formerly bought foreign goods will now buy American goods. On the other hand, the greater part of our foreign markets will remain untouched. We can still export our products to England, France, Italy, Spain and many other European countries, to all of South America and to the Orient.

"There will be some little readjustment of our exports, but our exports will continue, and increase, for the United States must of necessity supply a large part of the foreign demand which was formerly supplied by the nations now engaged in this destructive war.

"Thus both our products for foreign markets and our products for home consumption will be greatly augmented."

—Extract from a telegram sent by W. R. Hearst to his various newspapers.

The above quotation from Mr. Hearst's dispatch outlines in few words a story of prosperity and of opportunity that will be read with wonder for centuries to come.

Before many weeks shall have passed the people of the United States will realize—without losing their sympathy for the unfortunate peoples of Europe—that what means calamity for the other nations is destined to mean marvelous growth and prosperity for this fortunate land.

There was a day when selfish men demanded a heavy tariff that they might have an exclusive use of an American market. And always fair men have demanded a reasonable tariff that American workers and business men might have just protection against unfair competition.

But no man ever dreamed of the protection that has come to American industry, American business men and American labor in this dreadful war that spells horror for Europe and unparalleled prosperity for America.

A tariff, however great, could only give the American market in part to the American worker and business man.

But this war gives to America THE MARKETS OF THE WHOLE WORLD.

A tariff, could give to us only a great profit on such goods as we ourselves could buy and use at home.

But this war gives to the United States a market as wide as the whole world, it gives to the United States the opportunity to manufacture and to sell as much as the whole world can use.

One of the intelligent business men of this country, M. L. Rothschild, returning from Europe, talked to the editor of this newspaper and told the story which Mr. Hearst outlined in his message published last Monday, a story that will soon be clear in the mind of every American business man, of every American, of every American child.

It is the story of marvelous opportunity, based upon a horrible world-wide misfortune that touches all but ourselves.

It is the story of such prosperity as no nation in the world has ever seen destined to come to us, not through our seeking, but by the force of circumstances.

Before a year shall have passed the people of this country will realize that the world will take from them double and treble what it has taken before.

Our farmers will realize that all they can raise will be bought, and at the best prices.

We are about to enter upon a period of prosperity and development that will include every form of intelligence, every form of commercial, mechanical and laboring skill and energy.

Mr. Rothschild, coming from abroad, described the great stores of Paris closed.

Can any man doubt that the great stores of this country here at home, and through their agents abroad, will soon be doing a business that they had never dreamed of?

Over there the clerks and mechanics are at war.

All kinds of skill is forgotten except the skill that pulls a trigger, swings a sabre or cuts a throat.

To look at this country, and then to look upon the countries of the Old World, is like looking from the picture of heaven as the Bible represents it, and then into the infernal regions below.

Some of the ancient and bitter saints told us that the blessed were made more happy by contemplation of the sufferings below them.

Fortunately we have progressed beyond those saints.

We are made sad and miserable, not happy, by the sufferings of our brothers in Europe.

But we know that our duty to them, as to ourselves, is to use every possible ounce of energy, make every conceivable effort to do for the world the work that the whole world has been doing.

Think of the thousands of German ships idle, unable to work.

Think of the tens of thousands of factories idle.

Think of soldiers gathering together the cattle, taking them away to be slaughtered for men fighting.

Think of savings banks deposits confiscated.

Think of business absolutely stopped.

And then think of the marvelous possibilities that await this country.

There has never been such opportunity, never such prosperity as we shall see.

The United States will dominate the world, never lose its leading position, and use it always, let us hope, in the cause of peace and of world-wide happiness.

War in the Air, on the Land, Under the Sea---but Not in America.

The horrible battle of nations includes all the brutalities. But THIS NATION IS FREE.

And the opportunity of this nation is, by building up its own power, to help the nations of the world.

That war which spells disaster, poverty and horror for the nations of Europe spells opportunity, prosperity and marvellous prestige for the United States.

We bitterly regret the conflict, sympathize with our neighbors.

But by building this country and its resources we shall not only do the best thing for ourselves, but the best thing for all the other countries.

Recreation on Sundays

Religion Has So Changed That One Is Not Expected to Stay Home and Meditate.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

THE face of the world changes; maps change; lands and seas change; customs and manners change.

In the days of our early Christian fathers, in Puritan New England, Sunday was so solemnly observed that it was a day of horror to children and all young people full of the joy of life.

Many men who were brought up under these strict conditions, where laughter and merry conversation and even smiles were regarded as impious and wicked in the sight of God, broke into recklessness and atheism after they left the narrow environment for the larger world.

Those bigoted and intolerant forms of religion have caused more wickedness and sorrow in the world than morality and joy.

Fortunately for humanity there are few localities now where such solemnity and morbidness mark the coming of Sunday. People have ceased to think that God requires melancholy and gloom from those who love Him or that He demands continual psalm singing on one day of the week as evidence of a devout mind.

As our land grows in population and the trusts grow in monopoly of the soil and its products the struggle of the masses for a livelihood becomes greater and harder and the hours of leisure and pleasure fewer. There are hundreds of thousands of moral, hard-working, God-loving human beings all about us who have no hours for recreation or for life in the open air save on Sundays.

Unwholesome Religions

Any religion which debars these people from innocent recreations on that one day of the week is an unwholesome religion and will never open the gates of Paradise to its promoters or followers.

Lovers of golf and tennis find rest for the mind and vitality for the body in these harmless games. They send the tired toiler back to his indoor work on Monday morning with new energy and a refreshed mentality.

Yet there are still a few of the old type of bigoted religionists who would prevent the opening of golf or tennis grounds on Sunday if they could.

They would have the Puritan Sunday of solemn silence and continual church going and psalm singing re-established.

They would make it a sin to be merry and laugh and sing anything but hymns on Sunday.

These people have not looked deeply into life; they have not learned that sunshine and fresh air and all the gifts of Nature are an expression of the God they worship; they have not found out that health and vitality and innocent pleasures and joyous recreations are all agreeable to the Great Father who watches over His children just as they are agreeable and gratifying to the human father, who sees his children amusing themselves in harmless ways and basking in the beauties of Nature.

There is reverence and worship in the heart of one who really enjoys to the full a perfect Summer day.

Every thought of the human mind which springs from appreciation of the beauties and benefits of Nature and the healthful pleasures of life is religious in its tendency.

The people who play golf or tennis or any outdoor game for the joy of the exercise and the pleasure and health to be obtained in this manner are remembering the Sabbath day and keeping it holy.

It is a holy thing to be healthy and happy and to rejoice in life and action.

It is far holier than to sit in a sunless room and mourn over the sins of the world and comment on the faults of one's neighbor.

Every human being ought to sit alone with his own thoughts a few moments or an hour a day, and think about God.

Should Be Done Daily

This should be done every day, not merely on Sunday.

But it can be done in the open world, in the woods, or in the room or in the church as one may choose.

It can even be done in the crowded subway or surface cars by those who have learned how, through concentration of thought, to find silence in the midst of noise and seclusion in throngs.

An hour or a half hour or a quarter of an hour given every day to holy and peaceful and reverential thoughts opens the doors of heaven to us far more certainly than keeping Sabbath in the old-fashioned melancholy manner, and by shunning all pleasure, all games, all amusements for one day in the week.

Every day should be a holy day, but the one and only day in the week when work-weary men and women have freedom to enjoy the outer world and invigorating games and sports should not be spoiled by false notions of what constitutes religion.

Our churches should be maintained, and the pastors who preach the religion of love and humanitarianism and who work for the establishment of real brotherhood will never preach to empty pews, and these pastors will be broad enough to know the benefit that outdoor games bring to their parishioners.

There is one of the strongholds which the Roman Catholic priests have upon their people—they understand their need of such recreations and encourage them in outdoor exercise on Sunday, so long as they are faithful at service.

A Message of Optimism from Edward A. Filene

"Our merchants and manufacturers in America should profit enormously by the war."—EDWARD A. FILENE.

Mr. Filene has been in Paris for the past month.

He made the above statement with a full knowledge of conditions based upon personal observation.

There is no more progressive or far-seeing merchant than Mr. Filene.

Anything he says is worth listening to and heeding.

The merchants and manufacturers of Boston and America need no stronger MESSAGE OF OPTIMISM.

Those who act upon it THE EARLIEST will profit by it THE MOST.

Society Leaders Cartooned in Clay

Helena Smith Dayton, the charming artist and novelist, has invented a new form of art.

She makes funny clay cartoons of people.

She catches the interesting figures of society at their polo, their dancing, their golf. She seizes upon a characteristic attitude and fixes it in clay with a quaint mixture of humor, caricature and realism.

She has modelled at Newport some amusing examples of her interesting satiric art especially for this newspaper. Watch for them in next Sunday's AMERICAN.
